NARRATIVE PLANNING SHEET

PLOT: Fill in your story mountain for this idea/premise sentence. Keep it simple.

Backstory/Exposition: The town council is desperately trying to find out who is murdering people and why, the leader is leading her own investigation

Rising Action: The daughter of the leader knows who it is, but she can't reveal it because she knows if she does, she'll be next

Climax: Her mother has the main suspicion on her daughter's husband, and hooks him up to a lie detector to interrogate him privately

Falling Action: The husband is found guilty and sentenced to a public execution in the middle of town for the murder of all the councilors

Resolution: The daughter watches her husband hang, knowing that that is her 9th victim

CHARACTERS: Think about your character's motivations and appearance.

Character A = Mary (Daughter)

- Want: To reveal what she knows
- Need: To keep quiet
- Personality: Scared,
- Appearance:

Character B = Emmalee

- Want: To find the killer
- Need: To lead the council
- Personality: Tough

Narrative Writing

"It was a pleasure to burn" - This is a gripping because it raises the question of why they are burning, what happened to cause it, why they have positive emotions and whether it is figurative or literal

'Jonathan had a brilliant idea for a documentary' is an effective opening line because it intrigues the reader to know Jonathan and the documentary he's making

1. The story begins normal, before the character of Sergi is introduced, and he then begins to talk when Jonathan is murdered, the tense goes from past to present
2. The writer attempts to trick the reader by talking about how Sergi is going to avoid the last wish

"Emmalee know it wasn't going to be long before the murderer struck again, so she had to act first."

"She hadn't done anything like this before"

"8 people were dead, how many more can there be before the killer is found?"

"Mary knew she couldn't tell anyone, to protect them"
